CHILDREN FATALLY BURNED BY FIRE IN DOG SHED

Homecoming Americans, re Europe, bring back a startling story-or rather series of storles called, is a daughter of one of New York's oldest families, and who for years has queened it at a social luminary in London. These stories are of so tounding a nature that even the side could scarcely believe them until unmistakable verification was received. Before going into the rather shocking details of the matter it may not be indiscreet to recall a half-forgotten affair whereof Lady Thurso was the heroine and which has a direct bearing on the present revela-

As a girl the present Countess was far from wealthy. She met and loved a dashing young Austrian diplomat, Rudolf Villars Her infatuation was returned a hundredfold and the lovers be time had wealth or prospects. Yet the betrothal was sanctioned

Then Thurso appeared on the scene. While not then rich, he was heir to the earldom he has since inherited. The young lady's mother, in worldly wise manner. broke the engagement of her daughter to Rudolf. The latte left England heartbroken; while the unhappy girl, like a dutiful daughter, obeyed the maternal commands, and, when Thurso laid his heart and future earldom at her pretty feet, she graciously accepted both. The Villars affair ended ten years ago, and until lately it had died out of society's rather short memory until most stirring and HAS HIS LEG SCRATCHED unforseen events revived it. These events are set forth in the second instalment of E. F. Benson's masterpiece, "The House of Defence," which will appear in this paper next Sunday.

"The House of Defence" is the most notable work of fiction the year has produced, and is appearing serially and exclusively in this paper. The first instalment was printed last Sunday and the edition was early exhausted. For this reason readers are advised to order in advance

A full synopsis of the events chronicled in the first instalment Splendid Success of Amateurs at will be published next Sunday, thus permitting readers who were unable to secure last week's fiction supplement to familiarize themselves with the events chronicled in the first chapters. No one can afford to miss this great novel. It is unlike any other to avoid disappointment,
